

The Legal Profession – Information for Intending GDL Students

ENTRY TO THE SOLICITORS' BRANCH OF THE LEGAL PROFESSION

As you prepare to start your GDL course at Manchester Metropolitan University, you need to be aware of several important factors regarding entry into the solicitors' branch of the legal profession. Probably the most significant of these is that you should be considering applying for a training contract before you commence your GDL. Most of the larger firms of solicitors in the City of London and in the regional centres recruit two years ahead. In other words, you will need to apply to these by July 2010 (and sometimes even earlier) for inclusion in the round of first interviews. These firms also offer paid vacation schemes in the Easter and/or Summer holidays and often run the first stage of assessment for a training contract on these schemes. If you wish to apply for a place on the vacation scheme, then the closing dates are earlier i.e. January or February 2010. Second stage interviews tend to take place in August or September 2010 and offers of training contracts will be made in October in order to commence in September 2012.

This forward recruitment has advantages:

- i. If successful, you are free to concentrate on your studies, which are going to be intensive and demanding;
- ii. The firms concerned usually offer good conditions of service, including a systematic and carefully monitored training scheme;
- iii. Many of the firms pay course and examination fees for the GDL and Legal Practice Course. They may also give a maintenance grant for these courses in order to help with living costs. This has obvious benefits as you are most unlikely to receive financial assistance from your local authority.

However, there are disadvantages:

- i. You must undertake in-depth research into the training and the range of legal work offered by these firms in the next two or three months;
- ii. You will have to choose specific areas of law in which you will practise for at least the first two years of your career, before you have acquired sufficient legal knowledge to appreciate what these specialisms will entail;
- iii. Settling into a new academic field, a new institution and a new geographical location brings its own pressures without adding those of writing CVs and preparing for interviews.

CURRENT EMPLOYMENT SITUATION

Although the number of practising solicitors has grown rapidly in recent years to around 112,000, there is intense competition for training places. Over 10,000 students enrol on the Legal Practice Course (LPC) each year whereas the number of training contracts registered with the Law Society in 2007-08 was only 6,303.

As a result, those applying for trainee solicitor vacancies face stiff competition, with many firms setting their entry requirement at a minimum of an upper second degree plus good A-level grades. In addition, firms want evidence of your commitment and usually expect you to have undertaken at least one vacation placement or have done some legal work experience.

It is also important to be aware that starting salaries can be quite low. The Law Society currently sets a minimum salary for first year trainees of £18,590 in London and £16,650 in the rest of England and Wales. Whilst the commercial firms may pay in excess of this figure, many smaller firms will pay only the minimum.

It is extremely difficult to predict the situation that will face students who delay applying for training contracts until closer to the end of their studies. Vacancies in medium-sized firms, general/high street practice, Legal Aid work and local authorities are available. In recent years, some large corporate/commercial firms have offered a small number of late vacancies.

DECIDING TO APPLY IN 2010

If you would like to apply to the larger practices this year, in order to commence a training contract in 2012, careful preparation is essential during the late spring and summer. You may have already seen your University Careers Adviser before graduating and some background reading may have been recommended to you. If not, the following booklets will provide much of the essential information:

Legal Sector	ACGAS Sector Briefing
Target Law	www.targetjobs.co.uk/law
Prospects Law	www.prospects.ac.uk/p/sectors/law_sector.jsp
Applying for a Training Contract	Manchester Metropolitan University Careers & Employability Service (Contains information about completing a CV and covering letter.)

These are available on reference in the Careers Information Room at All Saints. In addition, detailed information is given at www.sra.org.uk. The Solicitor's Regulation Authority help line - tel. 0870 606 2555 is provided to answer specific queries from students about the process of becoming a solicitor.

VACATION PLACEMENTS

To aid your decision-making and to enhance the content of your CV, you should undertake some relevant work experience or shadowing before commencing the GDL. Indeed, a significant proportion of solicitors use vacation placements as part of their selection process.

Work experience is normally gained through a vacation placement in a solicitor's office but experience gained in local authority or company legal departments, the magistrates' courts, the Crown Prosecution Service (CPS) or similar are all acceptable. It may also be useful to do a mini-pupillage in barristers' chambers to confirm that the solicitors' branch of the legal profession is the right one for you.

As stated in the first section, many larger firms have established Easter/Summer vacation schemes. They will normally offer a weekly wage or assist with travelling expenses.

However, placements in smaller firms may have to be undertaken on a voluntary basis.

Many of the formal schemes are listed in the Vacation Placements section of the PROSPECTS web site at www.prospects.ac.uk. However, you can make your own speculative approaches to firms of solicitors and organisations with legal departments in which you are interested. The "Find A Solicitor" search function on the home page of the Law Society's web site www.lawsociety.org.uk is particularly helpful when making such applications.

In addition, attending Open Days which are organised by some firms, work-shadowing a solicitor for one or two days, visiting the courts, or undertaking voluntary work in an advice centre can all be acceptable to recruiting firms seeking evidence of your commitment to a career in law.

ENTRY TO THE BARRISTERS' BRANCH OF THE LEGAL PROFESSION

Entry to the Bar is extremely competitive. It is a small profession with approximately 12,000 barristers practising at the self-employed Bar and 3,000 in employed practice.

There are approximately 1800 places on the Bar Vocational Course (BVC), which will become the new Bar Professional Training Course (BPTC) in 2010. In 2007-08 only 561 pupillages were registered with the Bar Standards Board. The Northern Circuit, based in Manchester, offers about 30-40 pupillages each year and there are reasonable prospects of securing tenancy on completion.

The Bar Council now authorizes organizations other than chambers to offer both first and second six pupillages. Examples include solicitors, local government, and commercial organizations with legal departments, charities, citizens' advice bureaux and law centres. In all cases, the pupillage must be undertaken with a practising barrister who is entitled to act as a pupil master. Evidence so far, however, indicates that this has had minimal impact upon the number of pupillages on offer each year.

In addition to the very tight employment market, the financial problems facing would-be barristers remain considerable. All pupillages are now funded to a minimum level of £833.33 per month. In the second six, this can take the form of a minimum earnings guarantee. However, the earnings of a new tenant are unlikely to be as good as those received by a newly-qualified assistant solicitor.

Before embarking on the Academic Stage of Training, do consider whether you have the necessary qualifications, skills and abilities to succeed.

MINI-PUPILLAGES

Before you start the GDL, you should complete at least one mini-pupillage. Details of chambers offering mini-pupillages appear in the "Pupillages and Awards Handbook" and can be viewed at www.pupillages.com. Personal copies can be obtained from the Bar Council.

During your GDL year, it may also be possible to participate in the Marshalling Scheme. This is organized by the Recorder of Manchester in conjunction with the School of Law and offers a unique opportunity to shadow members of the Bench.

IMPORTANT DATES IN 2010-11

MARCH 2011

A National Pupillage Fair normally takes place in London in March. This is designed to assist you in selecting which sets of chambers to apply to. Full details, including a registration form, will be available on the www.targetjobs.co.uk/law web site once details are finalised.

LATE APRIL/EARLY MAY 2011

Closing date for pupillages being processed through Pupillage Portal.

It is important to note that a few chambers now recruit up to two years ahead. Some chambers do not use Pupillage Portal and recruit by direct application, either on their own application form or via submission of a CV and covering letter. These chambers use their own individual closing dates.

All pupillages, whether Pupillage Portal or not, have to be advertised in accordance with Bar Standards Board regulations and appear on a dedicated web site – www.pupillages.com.

EARLY NOVEMBER 2010

Likely closing date for applications for Inns of Court BVC Scholarships.

JANUARY 2011

Closing date for first round applications for the Bar Professional Training Course starting in September 2011 through the BPTC online applications system. (www.barprofessionaltraining.org.uk). Applications for BOTH the full-time & part-time BPTC are made through this system.

31 MAY 2011

Closing date for application for admission to one of the Inns of Court. Admission is required in order to register for the 2011-12 Bar Professional Training Course. It may take a few weeks for the Inn to process your papers, so early application is advisable.
